

Gary Teh <garyjob@agroverse.shop>

Subject: Referral from Heather Granato – Small-farm single-estate cacao supporting Amazon rainforest restoration

1 message

Gary Teh <garyjob@agroverse.shop>
To: maggiejaqua@wfcinc.com

Thu, Mar 26, 2026 at 5:56 PM

Dear Maggie,

Heather Granato at Nutrachievement Inc. suggested I reach out, in case our work at Agroverse.shop might be a fit for WholeFoods Magazine.

Agroverse sources premium single-estate organic cacao from small, multi-generational family farms—typically about 3–4 hectares—practicing traditional cabruca agroforestry in Brazil's Bahia and Pará. Cacao grows under diverse native shade; many of these plots are rebuilding biodiversity on land that was previously degraded pasture. We source through a grassroots community network and keep direct relationships with growers instead of anonymous bulk trade.

Each purchase supports a broader effort to restore 10,000 hectares of Amazon rainforest. The QR code on every bag links to the specific source farm (videos, harvest context) and to the trees tied to that sale's proceeds.

That gives independent natural retailers a clear farm-to-cup story—easy for wellness-focused shoppers to grasp by scanning the code.

Here is a quick introduction of our community project
<https://www.instagram.com/p/DJqW8TRtJK3/>

Thank you for the work you and the WholeFoods Magazine team do covering practical innovation in natural products.

Warm regards,
Gary Teh
Founder / Steward, Agroverse
415-300-0019
garyjob@agroverse.shop
<https://agroverse.shop>

✓ Email tracked with Mailsuite · Opt out